Let's Start!

There are many types of jobs. Let's find out about some of them!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use basic information in simple situations.

Ask your partner:

- What job do you want? Why?
- What is a bad job? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can ask people what they do.
- I can talk about occupations.
- I can talk about frequent actions.
- I can use words about jobs.

Let's Explore!

Five people talk about their jobs. Who is an actor? Who works for a paper*?

* A woman is called an "actor" or an actress.

 "Paper" is another way to say newspaper.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Joe: My name is Joe. I am a firefighter. I stop fires. I work for the fire department. What do you do?
- Cynthia: My name is Cynthia. I'm an actor. I'm also a singer. I act and sing in a studio. I don't like to dance. I like to travel to many countries.
- Joseph: Nice to meet you, Cynthia. I'm Joseph. I'm a writer. I write for television and films. What do you do?
- Kayla: I'm a nurse. My name is Kayla. I help doctors in a hospital. What about you?
- Jennifer: I'm a cartoonist. I work for the newspaper. I draw cartoons for the paper. Do you read the paper?

Learning Points

Job Titles

Many job titles are made by adding an ending to a verb. You can add the endings -er, -or, -ist.

Verb	Ending	Job Title
teach	-er	teacher, dancer, baker, waiter, farmer
act	-or	actor, conductor, professor, mayor, translator
cartoon	-ist	cartoonist, dentist, scientist, hair stylist

NOTE: There are some jobs which do NOT have endings added on. For example: chef, pilot, nurse, salesperson.

You use the verb to be when you talk about job titles.

Examples:

- She is a conductor.
- He is a baker.
- They are scientists.
- I am a dancer.
