Let's Start!

When do you go to work? When do you go to school? How long are your classes?

Learning Outcome

Express information about daily or weekly routine in a very simple way.

Ask your partner:

- What are your favorite activities?
- How often do you do them?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about daily activities.
- I can ask questions about time using When.
- I can ask questions using How often and How long.

Let's Explore!

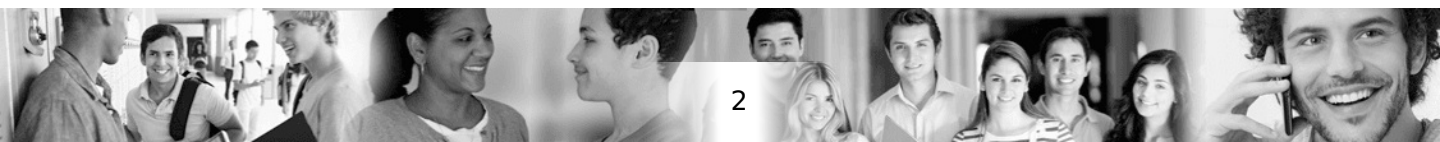

Julia and Jennifer talk about some daily activities they do. Is Lisa tired after work?

* In North America, people usually finish "work" at 4 or 5 p.m.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Julia: Do you take yoga classes, Jennifer?
Jennifer: Yes. It's a new activity for me. I go with Pete.
Julia: So you go in the afternoon?
Jennifer: When do you go?
Julia: I take the evening class with Lisa. She works in the afternoon.
Jennifer: How often does she work?
Julia: She works every day, from Monday to Friday. She usually finishes at 4:00.
Jennifer: How long is the class?
Julia: It's one hour long.
Jennifer: It lasts for one hour? Isn't Lisa tired after that?
Julia: Lisa is never tired! She wakes up at 6 a.m. and goes for a jog!
Jennifer: That's amazing.

Let's Practice!

What do you know about the yoga class?

Learning Points

Asking Questions with When

You ask questions with When to know the time, day or date of an activity.

When is the first word in the question.

It is followed by the verb to be or a form of do.

When + verb to be + subject ... ?

When + do/does + subject + verb ... ?

Examples:

- When is the class?
- When do you start yoga?
- When does your class finish?
- When are the rooms open?
- When does the library open?

Asking Questions with How Often and How Long

You ask How often to know the frequency of an activity.

You ask How long to know the duration of an activity.

These words are followed by do or does or the verb to be.

Examples:

- James: How often does your sister swim?

Alex: Once a week.

James: How often do you swim?

Alex: Twice a week.

- James: How long is the class?

Alex: The class is 1 hour long.
